However, the opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect the position or policy of the U.S. Office of Education and no official endorsement by the U.S. Office of Education should be inferred."

In cooperation with the National Indian Education Association Library Project, the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe has been developing library and information services for residents of the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation since 1972. Temporary headquarters for the Library Project, which serves as the official library for Standing Rock Community College as well as the public library facility, is located in the recently completed Skills Center, rooms 1 and 2 in Fort Yates. It is open Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Tuesday and Thursday nights until 9 p.m., and on Sunday from 1-5 p.m. Also under development are three branch School-Community libraries located in the districts of Cannonball, North Dakota, and Bullhead and Little Eagle, South Dakota.

In addition to providing extensive collections in each library on the Lakota and other Indian tribes of North America and Canada, there are many books for all ages on such topics as: arts and crafts, mythology, religion, novels and short stories, animals, science, mathematics, health care, building trades, legal manuals, dictionaries in English and Lakota, encyclopedias, atlases, better consumer practices, business, how to improve your oral and written skills, how to take federal, state and local employment exams and pass G.E.D. or college entrance exams, how to build a tipi, canoe, and cradle boards, and how to repair your car and household appliances to mention only a few of the many materials available. If the book, film, record, or tape that you want is not in the libraries, the staff will contact other libraries throughout the Dakotas to get you what you need.

To make sure you're receiving the most current news about what is happening in Indian and non-Indian country today, the libraries subscribe to over 150 magazines and newspapers that are received on a daily, weekly or monthly basis. The Library Project also publishes a weekly newsletter, has a weekly radio report which comes to you over KOLY radio station (turn to 1300 on your am dial) each Wednesday at 1:35 p.m., and is making video and audio cassettes of current events on the reservation for use by your generation and those to come. It is also developing an extensive archival collection on the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation. An example of the information to be found here are the past minutes of the Tribal Council meetings held from the 1950's to the current times.

Local artists are encouraged to exhibit and sell creative works at Standing Rock Tribal Library Headquarters as well as in each of its branch school-community libraries. Anyone interested in developing a Standing Rock Artists Association or participating in such a local group, please contact your library. Arts and crafts classes, children's story hours, film series, guest lecture series, and puppet shows telling the "Legends of the Sioux" are also to become regular features of your school and community libraries.

For more information regarding the library services and materials available on the reservation, please call Standing Rock Tribal Library Headquarters at the Skill Center in Fort Yates, North Dakota, at 701-854-2901.

Community Action Agency

Tribal Program

Fort Yates, North Dakota

Phone: 701-854-2511 or 854-2521

Within the Community Action Agency which is funded through the Office of Native American Programs, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, there are several programs such as: Neighborhood Centers, Home Improvement, Community College, Adult Education, Emergency Foods, Youth Ranch, and all central offices. The purpose of these programs, according to Executive Director James Morgan, is to provide a better working relationship among all of the districts of Standing Rock and the Tribal Headquarters Office and other administration. The agency also works with youth, working people, and elderly people to provide increased educational services, repairs and improvements of homes, food for those who cannot afford it, and other services upon request for the benefit of the people of the reservation and for the betterment of each district.

The Community Action Agency is also on call to help each district with any questions or difficulties they may encounter in setting up their District Initiative Projects which came into being when the administration of the monies appropriated for Neighborhood Centers were turned over to the seven local districts on the reservation. The purpose of this project is to give incentive to local districts to come up with projects themselves which will most likely benefit their own special needs. C.A.P. assistance could take many forms including the following examples: administration, finance, purchasing, among other technicalities.

Also under the jurisdiction of the C.A.P. Agency are the Neighborhood Centers which were established for the purpose of providing local involvement in all of the seven districts on the Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, and providing one central office in each district where people could relax, contribute their time and efforts for the betterment of themselves and their district, and to establish an office for increased communications between the district and other programs on the reservation operated by the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe. The following districts have Neighborhood Centers now in operation: Little Eagle, coordinated by Rose Many Deeds, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday; and the McLaughlin Sub-District, coordinated by Jeanette Wiest, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday. Other districts which have made plans to set up Neighborhood Centers, but as yet are not finalized are Bullhead and Wakpala.

The purpose of the monthly newspaper of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, the Standing Rock Star, is to promote, increase and improve communications throughout the reservation concerning what is happening both on the reservation and throughout the Indian country today. This newspaper which is primarily supported through ads published in the paper, has created and maintained an open channel through which information flows in all directions. It provides for improved coordination of activities and clarifies current issues by presenting both pro, con, and conservative points of view in order that all may make improved decisions based on facts rather than rumor. In the hands of those living off the reservation it performs the important task of giving identity to the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe. It provides a voice that can and will be heard to those wishing to be heard. Yearly subscription rate is $5.00. For more information contact Harriet Skye, Tribal Communications Coordinator, Standing Rock Sioux Tribal Office, Fort Yates, North Dakota.
